LaserJet Managed MFP E72500, E77800, E82500, E87600 Series

How to use the hole punch

- Introduction
- Hole punch when copying from the automatic document feeder (ADF)
- Hole punch when printing from a Windows® application using an HP UPD print driver or HP PCL 6 and HP PCL-6 V4 printer specific print drivers
- Hole punch when printing from an OS X application using an HP print driver
- Output options

Introduction

Use the hole punch feature to automatically punch holes in pages during printing. HP printers with the either the HP LaserJet booklet finisher or the HP LaserJet inner finisher installed provide several options to hole punch copied sheets, and some of those options also include stapling. Learn which hole punch option to use for the appropriate outcome:

- Hole punch from the automatic document feeder (ADF)
- Hole punch from a Windows® application using an HP UPD print driver or HP PCL 6 and HP PCL-6 V4 printer-specific print drivers
- Hole punch from an OS X application using an HP print driver

NOTE: The number of holes available varies by country/region. The possible options are described at the end of this section.

- For countries/regions that use metric measurements, two or four hole options are available with the HP LaserJet booklet finisher and the HP LaserJet inner finisher.
- For countries/regions that use imperial measurements, two or three hole options are available with the HP LaserJet booklet finisher and the HP LaserJet inner finisher.
- For Sweden, there are specific HP LaserJet booklet finisher and the HP LaserJet inner finishers

Hole punch when copying from the automatic document feeder (ADF)

Use these steps to configure the default settings for punching holes in when making copies at the printer.

1. On the printer control panel Home screen, select Copy.

2. Select Options.
3. Select Staple/Hole Punch, and then select the position and number of holes to punch.

NOTE: Available options can vary, and depend on the specific printer and finishing accessory involved.

4. Select OK.
5. From the Copy screen, enter the number of needed copies in the Copies box.
6. Select Copy to complete the job.

Hole punch when printing from a Windows® application using an HP UPD print driver or HP PCL 6 and HP PCL-6 V4 printer specific print drivers

1. In the application, select File and then Print.
2. Click Printer Properties or Printer Preferences depending on the application the job will print from.
3. In the Properties dialog box, click the Output tab, and from the Punch drop-down menu, select the appropriate hole punch output. The following hole punch options are available for either a 2/3 Hole Puncher or 2/4 Hole Puncher:

NOTE: Available options can vary, and depend on the specific printer and finishing accessory involved.

4. Click Print.

Output options

- Introduction
- Hole punch only output options
- Hole punch and staple output options

Introduction

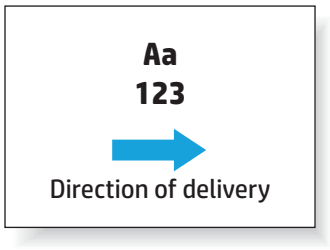
The printer paper handling accessories have various hole punch and staple options for different paper types.

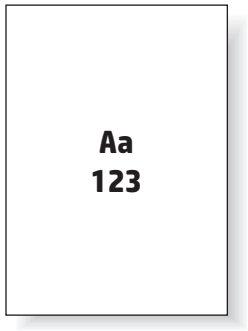
The printer output option tables indicate the direction the paper is loaded in the tray and what the output will be:

- Feed orientation: long edge feed or short edge feed
  - Long edge feed orientation

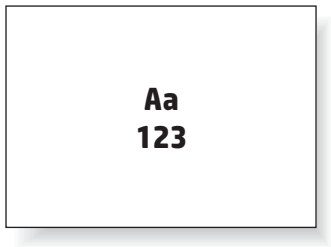
  - Short edge feed orientation



- Document orientation: portrait or landscape
  - Portrait document orientation



– Landscape document orientation



- Finishing: staple, hole punch, or both

Some output device options are not supported and are indicated as such in the output options tables. Some drivers will allow these unsupported choices to be selected in the driver. For options that are not supported, the job will print but no output paper handling, such as hole punch or staple, will be performed.

NOTE: The following tables are examples of supported features.
